official distinction and substituted a knowledge of political economy and international law.

"He then proposed the establishment of agricultural schools in all the provinces for the purpose of teaching the farmers better methods of agriculture, and that the Lu-Han railroad should be completed as expeditiously as possible.

He ordered the establishment of patent and copyright laws, that the military examinations should be changed so as to conform to the proposed new order of things, and he promised rewards to all those who distinguished themselves as authors or inventors.

"He ordered the officials to do all in their power to encourage trade and assist the merchants. School boards were established in every city in the empire; a bureau of mines was formed; journalists were encouraged to write on all political subjects, Jung Lu and Liu Kunl were ordered to consult on the establishment of naval academies and training ships; schools were ordered opened in connection with all the foreign legations, for the benefit of the sons of Chinese living in foreign countries; commercial bureaus were ordered established for the encouragement of trade at Shanghai and Hankow, and in addition to all this, the officials throughout the Empire were ordered to assist the young Emperor in his work of reform.

"Any one who is interested in the work of reform for China may look over his edicts in the most critical way they will and they will not find a single one which would have been anything but a benefit to the country. He did more than issue edicts, for the funds for the establishment of the university at Peking were at once set apart and the university was established, and in spite of the anti-foreign feeling in the palace and the school since his dethronement, they have not been able to divert the funds to any other channel, however much they have tried to do so.

"But it was his surgical operations that caused him trouble. So long as he confined himself to the making of new offices there was no trouble, but as soon as he began to abolish old ones and dismiss Viceroy and Governors, there arose a howl which reached the ears of the Empress Dowager, and the palace and the throne of the young man was ruthlessly taken from him, and he was confined to an island in the palace grounds under strict guard.

"It is certain that when the history of China comes to be written the attempted reforms of Kuang Hsu will be classed among those of the best emperors of the past, and either he will be restored to his throne to carry out his reforms or he will be looked upon as the first martyr for liberty and progress among the emperors of the Middle Kingdom."

Cupid's bunker: "The Tiffington-Smith wedding is off." "How dreadful. What's the reason?" "Oh, Miss Tiffington wanted her name in three sizes larger type than his on the announcement cards, and he wouldn't have it."—Indianapolis Journal.

BANDMASTER BERGER WILL SPEED THE PARTING OF THE GEIER WITH HAWAIIAN AIRS

CAPTAIN BERGER will blow the Geier to sea. The German man-of-war will sail Monday for the scene of trouble in China. Kappelmeyer Berger has failed to send off few warships leaving Honolulu harbor since he first introduced the music habit into Hawaii twenty-eight years ago. But it is especially fitting that a vessel of the Kaiser should up-anchor to the inspiring strains of Herr Berger's band for in three wars in the Fatherland Berger proved his German heart.

Now he is an American. Hear Berger tells it and one will realize the gay times of long ago, when Kalakaua and Berger ruled the wave. "Veil, ye'll go to dot sheep and dot sheep and dot sheep," dots vot de Ging would say," said Berger reminiscently last night. "Kalakaua roost luffed to hear de band blayin' ven he was sittin' mit a big glass on der dable und de mens-of-war all around enjoyin' demselve."

Now the days of kings are over, but Berger still feels it his duty to speed the visitors with "Aloha Oe," the last sad strains in their ears. The Geier will go on Monday at an hour not yet known and which depends on the completion of coaling. The musicians will go alongside in a boat and give the Deutschers a taste of Hawaiian airs.

COUNT VALANGER SAILED FOR CHINA

Count Alexander George Valanger has sailed for the scene of trouble in China. The Count has been a familiar figure on the streets of Honolulu for some weeks past. He arrived on the same steamer that brought former Queen Liliuokalani and Robert Wilcox, and it is said that it was owing to the vivid pictures painted by the latter that the Count was tempted to Hawaii. It is understood that the Russian nobleman left a position in Washington, D. C., to seek his fortune in Honolulu, and that he blamed Wilcox for the ill luck that befell him here.

He brought an inconsiderable sum of money and evidently the hopes that he had were dashed. A few weeks after settling here he advertised for pupils in foreign languages, but did not secure enough to pay his living. He dwelt in a humble abode here but was conspicuous about the hotels and at the Opera House during the Neill season. His tall, striking figure and peculiar dress and mannerisms attracted much attention to him. That he was a nobleman cannot be doubted, for when a certain Russian Prince came through here a week or two after the Count's arrival, the two dined together intimately and spent the evening in each other's company. That the Count was reduced to serious money straits is believed, as he was compelled to sacrifice many of his personal belongings to obtain passage.

He goes to Yokohama in the steamer. He said before leaving that he would enter the Russian army and expected rapid advancement if the war in China continued. He also said that he expected to return to Honolulu some day, and jokingly remarked that when he did come back he would be a Prince. The Count was a man of very agreeable disposition, who paid his way, asked no favors from anyone, and made no pretensions.

Siam's crown prince, who is studying at Oxford, is bound to be an up-to-date potentate like his father. He recently developed appendicitis, and enjoyed the modern operation for that misfortune.
